N.C. Center for Health & Wellness

Groundbreaking Set for Education, Research and Outreach Center

UNC Asheville will break ground on the North Carolina Center for Health & Wellness on April 29, launching what is expected to be a regional hub for state-of-the-art education, research and programming to help citizens lead healthier lives.

When it opens in 2010, the N.C. Center for Health & Wellness will be home to UNC Asheville's newest and fastest growing degree program, Health & Wellness Promotion. The center will house classrooms, research and teaching labs, strength training and aerobics rooms, offices, and meeting and seminar space. A key feature will be a "wellness café" and a demonstration kitchen for healthy cooking/eating courses. A 3,600-seat convocation center, named Kimmel Arena, will give UNC Asheville, for the first time, a space that can seat the student body and provide an adequate venue for Bulldogs basketball. Conferences, health fairs, Commencement, convocation and other university events will be held in the center.

Asheville, for the first time, a space that can seat the student bo

As it serves to educate health and wellness professionals and conduct research, the center will build partnerships and foster community programs that promote health and wellness. Initial emphasis will be on three of the state's most pressing wellness concerns: childhood obesity, workplace wellness and senior wellness. "We believe that the North Carolina Center for Health & Wellness will be a leading catalyst for healthy living for North Carolinians of all ages," Chancellor Anne Ponder said. "The center will link our university's interdisciplinary focus, our emphasis on undergraduate research and service learning, and our faculty and students to the health and wellness of our community, our region and our state."

Collaborations with Mountain Area Health Education Center, Mission Hospitals, Western Carolina University, Asheville-Buncombe Technical Community College and other local and regional health organizations already have begun. Joseph F. Damore, president and CEO of Mission Health & Hospitals and a UNC Asheville Foundation Board director, sees several possibilities for collaboration. "UNC Asheville's work could support Mission's efforts to provide acute care and wellness services for our region, and it supports Mission's vision of Western North Carolina becoming the healthiest region in the state."

The center brings significant economic benefits because relocating companies look for areas that make health and healthy living a priority, said county commissioner and UNC Board of Governors member David Young.

www.unca.edu/ncwell

Above and right:
The $42 million,
133,500-square-foot
N.C. Center for Health &
Wellness, to be located behind the Health & Fitness Center, will house 12 classrooms and labs, training and aerobics rooms, offices,
meeting rooms, dance studio, wellness café with demonstration kitchen, and Kimmel Arena.

(Images by Bowers, Ellis + Watson Architects, PA

Johnnetta B. Cole, 2008 Commencement speaker.

Record Class of 700 to Graduate May 10

More than 700 students—the largest class in UNC Asheville history—are candidates for degrees at Commencement on Saturday, May 10, at 9 a.m. on the University Quadrangle.

Johnnetta B. Cole, Ph.D., president emerita of Bennett College for Women and Spelman College, will deliver the Commencement address and receive a doctor of humane letters degree. A distinguished educator and humanitarian, Cole is chair of the board of the Johnnetta B. Cole Global Diversity and Inclusion Institute, which she founded at Bennett College.

Cole's work for equality and social justice as a college professor and president, and in her writings, speeches and community service, consistently address issues of racial, gender and all other forms of discrimination. A graduate of Oberlin College, she earned master's and doctoral degrees in Anthropology from Northwestern University and taught at Emory University, where she is professor emerita and Presidential Distinguished Professor of Anthropology, Women's Studies and African American Studies.

Cole made history in 1987 when she became the first African American woman to serve as president of Spelman College, and in 2004 she was the first person of color to serve as United Way of America board chair.

Graduating seniors will attend a rehearsal Friday, May 9, on the Quad after a breakfast in their honor at 8:30 a.m. in the Health & Fitness Center. Guest seating for Commencement begins at 7:30 a.m. Tickets are not required. A reception will follow the ceremony. In case of severe storms, Commencement will be held at the Asheville Civic Center.

www.unca.edu/commencement

NATIONAL PARENTS COUNCIL

Pat and Paul Samuels, co-chairs (Jordan Samuels '08) Fairview

Allison Brandy and David Scruggs (Gillian Scruggs '11) Winston-Salem

Adrienne Crowther (Gabrielle Crowther '10) Asheville

Lilly Driver (Heather Driver '11) Cherokee

Sherry and Greg Glance (Sara Glance '09) Candler

Carla and David Greenfield (Allison Greenfield '09) Pittsburgh, PA

Vikki and Ken Grodner (Stirling Grodner '09) Basking Ridge, NJ

Eli Jordfald and Rick Harmsen (Jenny Harmsen '11) Carv

Judy and Wes Irvine (Hannah Mackie '09) Baldwin, KS

Jayne Keifer and Jim Jenkins (Daniel Goodman '11) Carv

Joyce Watkins King and Gary King (Savannah King '11) Raleigh

Suzy and Bob Lippard (Brittany Lippard '08) Raleigh

Steve Mills (Peter Mills '09) Chapel Hill

Margy Murphy and John Erwin (Caitlin Erwin '09 & Patrick Erwin '11) Candler

Pam and King Prather (Lindsey Prather '10, Nicholas Prather '09, and Rachel Prather '10) Cary

Laura and Chris Privalle (Casey Privalle '10) Durham

Ex-Officio

Anne Ponder, Chancellor

William P. Massey, Vice Chancellor, Alumni & Development

Calvin Kelly, Assistant Vice Chancellor, Student Affairs

Rebecca Lamb, Director of Annual Giving Programs, Alumni & Development

Photos by Benjamin Porter and Chris Clevenger, with assistance from UNC Asheville Sports Information Office, Dr. Johnnetta Cole and Oksana Kukharets.

Family News is published in August, December and April for parents and families of UNC Asheville students. Produced by UNC Asheville Office of Publications, April 2008. 4,379 copies of this public document were printed at a cost of $1,292 or 30¢ per copy on paper containing 100% post-consumer waste from paper mills using wind power. ♣

This issue is underwritten by Sandra and Harry Johnson, Plastics Labeling LLC of Charlotte.

Gifts Support Wellness Center

Several area businesses have contributed to the N.C. Health & Wellness Center. In addition to a gift of $2 million from Asheville businessman Joe Kimmel to fund the arena that will bear his name, the following businesses have made gifts:

- The Cliffs Communities Inc., builder of golf communities around the world, including two in Buncombe County, provided about $2 million. "Our gift to UNC Asheville is a natural extension of our corporate values and a way for us to fully engage the surrounding community in an environment where personal goals are set and wellness ambitions are realized," said Jim Anthony, president and CEO.
- The BB&T Charitable Foundation donated $50,000. "UNC Asheville is a valuable regional and statewide asset," said Mike Willett, western region president. "Our financial contribution demonstrates our belief that the center will serve the citizens of Western North Carolina effectively in

- addressing health concerns of childhood obesity, workplace wellness and senior wellness, both now and in the future."
- HomeTrust Bank gave $25,000. "We are committed to our employees by making good health a cornerstone of our organization. We also believe in supporting a healthy community," said Dana Stonestreet, HomeTrust Bank president and CEO.
- Parsec Financial Management of Asheville gave $14,000 to assist students and faculty in developing research projects and programs. "The Parsec Prize is geared toward assisting organizations that benefit education and economic development in our area," Bart Boyer, Parsec CEO and chairman, said. "We feel that the N.C. Center for Health & Wellness is a great example of this type of work."
- A $10,000 gift from Progress Energy goes toward faculty and undergraduate student research

Showing support for the N.C. Health & Wellness Center with a donation: Mike Willett, BB&T Western Region president (left) and David L. Hayes, BB&T senior vice president (right) with UNC Asheville Chancellor Anne Ponder (center).

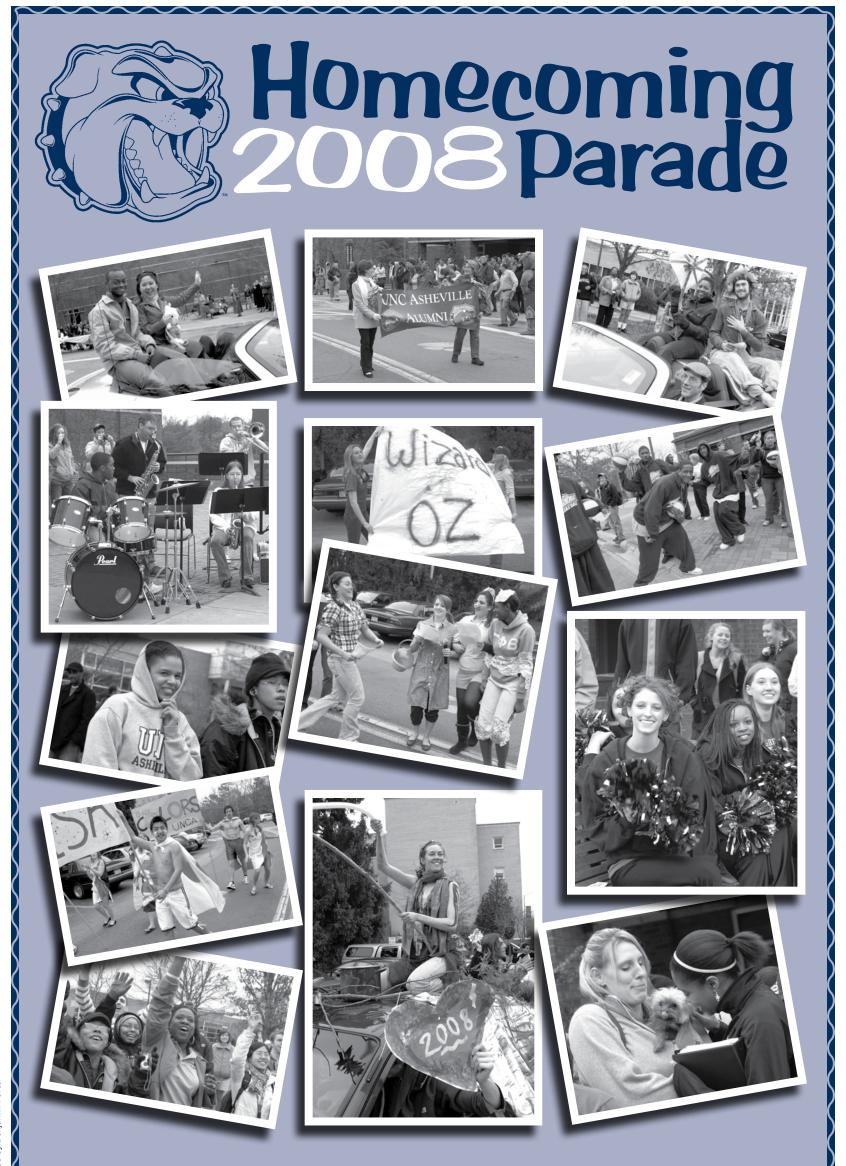

Grants Awarded to Faculty and Students

Although the N.C. Center for Health & Wellness isn't yet built, research and outreach have already started. Several faculty members and students received Wellness Initiative Starter Grants to pursue projects in 2008:

- Evelyn Chiang (Psychology) and Sandra Byrd (Education, Asheville Graduate Center), $14,350 to help design interventions for families struggling with obesity.
- Laura Facciponti (Drama), Mark Harvey (Psychology) and Connie Schrader

- (Health & Wellness), $17,000 to assess the effectiveness of conscious breathing, a stress-reduction technique.
- Heidi Kelley (Sociology and Anthropology) and Ken Betsalel (Political Science), $17,500 to explore workplace wellness among people with disabilities.
- Student recipients of $1,000 each are Gaia Boyd '10 (Sociology), Heather Gourley '08 (Spanish), Luella Heetderks '08 (Health & Wellness Promotion), Fran Oliver '08, Pamela Philyaw '08 (Psychology), DiAnna Ritola '08 (Psychology) and Morgan Silverman '08 (Psychology).

Homecoming is not just for alumni! Photos at right: Traditionally held in February to center around Bulldogs basketball, Homecoming always features a parade. This year's parade, held Feb. 21, included creative floats and entries by student organizations, cheerleaders, fraternities and sororities, all showing UNC Asheville school spirit and imagination.

Math Literacy Summit Stresses Connection to Job Success

A Math Literacy Summit on Feb. 27–28 drew nearly 500 people to hear keynote speaker Robert P. Moses, Algebra Project founder and civil rights activist, who believes math literacy is a social justice issue because not having the right math skills hinders employment prospects.

The Algebra Project takes the lowest-achieving students from the worst performing schools in the U.S. and tries to ensure they get a quality math education. Math Literacy Summit workshops explored connections between math literacy and quality education, personal finance, public health, creativity and social justice. The summit ended with a panel discussion on how segments of the community can work together to improve math literacy for people who do not have the math skills they need to compete in the current job environment.

"This was the first time so many different organizations were in the room talking about this one issue," said Math professor Sam Kaplan. "That was the heart of what this summit was trying to accomplish—getting people talking."

The event was sponsored by the Math Department and Multicultural

Student Programs, along with Mission Health & Hospitals, Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce and Buncombe County Department of Social Services.

www.unca.edu/math

Top: Robert P. Moses of the Algebra Project and Zofia Wleklinski '09 welcome students to the Math Literacy Summit. Right: Professor Sam Kaplan advises Natalie Rich '08 in the Math Lab.

Chamber Singers Perform at White House

The university's premiere student voice ensemble performed at the White House on Dec. 19, 2007, for VIP tours at the Holiday Open House. The university's Chamber Singers was the only North Carolina college choir invited to perform at the White House this past holiday season, said Melodie Galloway, assistant professor of Music. Galloway, who has performed at the White House before, was eager to make the opportunity available to her students.

"My former choir director encouraged me to send in the application," Galloway said. "Since the Chamber Singers was formed just over a year ago, I knew it was a long shot. But I wanted to pursue the opportunity because I knew how valuable the experience was to me."

The Washington performance tour included stops at Walter Reed Memorial Hospital, Koshland Science Museum and Annandale United Methodist Church.

Choir members are: Ingrid Allstaedt,
Brevard; Jonathon Barnes, Winston-Salem;
Steven Brooks, Chapel Hill; Rachael Cole,
Weaverville; Kathren Combs, Asheville; Carly
Crawford, Memphis, Tenn.; Caroline Fry,
Brevard; Stephen Greenslade, Chapel Hill;
Lauren Habenicht, Enka; Kevin Koyasu,
Tokyo, Japan; Robyn Lear, Asheville; Stephanie Marterre, Winston-Salem; Joshua McDaniel,
Shippensburg, Pa.; Christina Papandrea,
Statesville; Gregory Sain, Matthews; and Trevor
Worde, Southport.

Melodie Galloway (right) directs the UNC Asheville Chamber Singers at a White House holiday performance.

Student Health Insurance Required for Fall 2008

All full-time students will be required to purchase student health insurance or provide proof of comparable coverage, beginning with fall semester, according to a December 2007 recommendation by the Board of Trustees.

Waivers will be granted to full-time students (carrying 12 or more credit hours) who can document that they have a minimum level of health insurance coverage. Otherwise students will be required to purchase insurance through UNC Asheville at the estimated cost of $611 a year ($305.50 per semester) for 12-month coverage. Insurance will be provided through Pearce & Pearce Inc., a national student health insurance company, which already offers optional health insurance for UNC Asheville students. Premiums may be built into the "cost of attendance" for financial aid purposes.

Ten of the 16 University of North Carolina universities require students to carry health insurance, and two other campuses plan similar programs for fall 2008, said Bill Haggard, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

"In recent years, we have become deeply concerned about our uninsured students," Haggard said. "We know that students who are ill seek medical care earlier when they are covered by insurance, which can prevent treatable problems from growing into serious illnesses and medical crises. We have seen students' academic careers threatened when they become seriously ill or injured, and when uninsured students become ill or injured, that threat can be compounded by health care debt. It makes sense for the university to establish student health insurance coverage that provides access to quality health care and achieves a balance between coverage and cost."

www.unca.edu/shs

World of Work Trip Visits Chicago Alumni

Not all college students hit the beaches for Spring Break. Fifteen UNC Asheville undergraduates took on Chicago during their March 1–5 Spring Break, meeting with career professionals, making connections and getting that all-important foot in the door with future employers on the third annual World of Work Career Interest Trip. Sponsored by the Career Center, Alumni Office and a Parents Fund grant, the World of Work Career Interest Trips have taken students to New York and Washington, with future plans to visit Atlanta and Boston, depending on the students' interest and alumni availability for mentoring and advising.

The selection process is competitive, and Career Center Director Eileen Buecher and Associate Vice Chancellor for Alumni Kevan Frazier solicit applications in the fall. The goal of the intensive World of Work trips is to open students' minds to new careers and develop their current career goals, Buecher said. "Their confidence, professionalism and appreciation develop in leaps and bounds," she said. "They realize the value of their liberal arts education and its applications to the work world."

Students made 24 appointments at companies including the Chicago Board of Trade, Fox-TV, the Chicago Tribune and Sun Times and WGN radio.

Reconnecting with alumni is an important goal of the popular trips, Frazier said. "My favorite aspect of these trips is to see students find their life's work. Every year students tell us how it changes their lives."

www.unca.edu/alumni

Alumnus Makes "Legal Elite"

Derek Allen '93 (Political Science and History) has gone from tennis standout to courtroom star as one of Business North Carolina magazine's "Young Guns" in the state's Legal Elite, based on a poll of more than 600 North Carolina lawyers. Allen was selected as the best lawyer in the state under 40. A partner at Brooks, Pierce, McLendon, Humphrey & Leonard LLP in Greensboro, Allen specializes in land use and development and general business litigation. He earned a law degree from UNC Chapel Hill in 1997.

State of Black Asheville: Conference Addresses Key Issues

The second annual State of Black Asheville Conference, held Feb. 16 in Highsmith Union, drew more than 300 community leaders and citizens for presentations on health, social justice and education issues facing the African American community.

Students of Political Science professor Dwight Mullen organized the event and presented research, including Political Science majors Jason Tuell '08 and Zofia Wleklinsi '09. Tuell found that African American students take far fewer honors and advanced placement courses, that the top 10 percent of students in the 2005 Asheville High class were all white, and that in 2005–06 city schools suspensions totaled 1,129 for black students and 195 for whites.

A tutor leader in the AVID program (Advancement Via Individual Determination) at Asheville High School, Wleklinski is one of 65 UNC Asheville students who tutor each semester in the successful AVID program. She believes that it's the program's one-on-one, single-minded focus on student achievement that makes the difference.

"The students who succeed and go on to college do so because they are supported by a network of teachers, counselors and administrators with high expectations and faith in them," says Wleklinski, noting that students must take the college-track curriculum. "We're there for them. We teach them to have goals and how to reach them."

Participating in the strategic planning process (L–R): Christie Gonzales '08 (Mathematics); Alfred J. Whitesides Jr., Board of Trustees vice chair; David Peifer, Mathematics Department chair; Chancellor Anne Ponder.

Campus Collaborates to Develop Comprehensive Strategic Plan

Beginning this spring, university leaders will roll out a strategic plan that targets nine major UNC Asheville goals in three overarching areas: our public responsibility, our liberal arts mission and our long-term sustainability.

The five-year plan defines strategies and evidence-based ways to achieve the goals. A publication outlining the goals and strategies will be available by fall, as will an online workbook for faculty and staff to contribute their successes toward achieving goals. Sixty-one percent of employees and student leaders contributed to the planning process.

A national expert on strategic planning in higher education, Chancellor Anne Ponder was the driving force behind the plan, leading numerous "community conversations" over the last two years. These meetings allowed employees, faculty, students, staff, community citizens and leadership boards of the university to ask questions, examine new goals and evaluate UNC Asheville's capacity to achieve them. The resulting plan, titled Aspire Higher, was developed by a "think tank" comprising faculty, students, staff, administrators and leadership board members.

"This plan will serve as the framework, an important guide, but not an inflexible one, as the campus collaborates to achieve our goals toward the continuing success of North Carolina's public liberal arts university," said Chancellor Ponder.

More information about the two-year strategic planning process, which was led by the University Planning Council, is available at www.unca.edu/sp.

Outside the Dubai Women as Global Leaders Conference (L–R): Cassaundra Papaj, Oksana Kukharets, Grace Salzer, Mary Catherine Mills and Annalisa Littleton.

Students Attend Conference in Dubai

Sharing viewpoints with Middle Eastern women on leadership, life and cultural values was at the top of the list of strong impressions for six UNC Asheville students who attended the third annual Women as Global Leaders Conference, held March 10–12, in the United Arab Emirates.

"I went to Dubai for the conference, but the most valuable parts of the trip involved my interactions outside of the conference—with the people of Dubai, mostly expatriates from Pakistan and Egypt," said Cassaundra Papaj '08 (Biology), a GlaxoSmithKline Women in Science scholar. "I realize that there are rich and poor people everywhere, and that the rich obviously have more power and advantage than those who are not privileged and do not have the same opportunities and access."

Others on the trip were Political Science majors Oksana Kukharets '08, Madeline Jaekle '11, Grace Salzer '08 and Annalisa Littleton '09; and Biology major Mary Catherine Mills '08.

www.zu.ac.ae/leadership2008/

Travel Fund Supports Service Trip to Bolivia

Thanks to grants from the Mountains to the World International Travel Fund, 14 students volunteered in Montero, Bolivia, over spring break with Dr. John Baumrucker's Bolivia Mission, a nonprofit organization based in Highlands, N.C. Led by Political Science professor Linda Cornett and Linda Block of UNC Asheville's Lead Prevention Project, the students worked in a foster home for boys and an orphanage for girls, helped build a classroom, and served with a mobile medical clinic of the Bolivia Mission.

"We were able to do home visits with the medical mission team and see firsthand what daily life is like for rural families who are struggling with basic needs," Cornett said.

Because of the Mountains to the World International Travel Fund, this trip was very affordable for students."

—Shoshana Fried '08 (Economics and Spanish), Chapel Hill

Lauren Hodges '08 (Environmental Studies and Mathematics) assisted Block with developing and administering lead and mercury testing programs, ultimately aimed at reaching more than 1,000 children and adults.

Bolivia travelers were Lydia Doll, Britanny Tinkler, Albert Perkins, Kassidy Heffner, Kathryn Bove, Elizabeth Smith, Georgina Lanius, Lauren Wingo, Veronica Lazar, Shoshana Fried, Ashley Shimberg, Joshua Peller, Sarah Buchenberger and Lauren Hodges.

The Mountains to the World International Travel Fund was created in fall 2007 through a grant from the Community Foundation of Western North Carolina to make international volunteerism a reality for UNC Asheville students. The $100,000 gift provides travel stipends of up to $1,200 over the next three years, allowing students to experience new cultures while volunteering in underserved areas.

The fund is an especially good fit for the university's liberal arts mission, said Mark Gibney, Belk Distinguished Professor in the Humanities, fund coordinator. "This fund will help our students become global citizens," he said. "It's my hope that our students will go from the mountains to the world, and home again, bringing back to campus what they've learned. By volunteering while abroad our students gain a stunning glimpse into the lives of people very different than themselves."

www.unca.edu/studyabroad

Bulldogs Share Regular-Season Conference Title, Fall in NIT

The UNC Asheville men's basketball team came up short in a first-round National Invitation Tournament matchup with Ohio State on March 18 in Columbus, Ohio.

The Bulldogs shot 64 percent, but had more turnovers (16) than field goals (14) in the first half, and the top-seeded Buckeyes held on for an 84-66 win in Dayton, Ohio. "It's been a long, long season and those guys played their hearts out," said Head Coach Eddie Biedenbach, whose team set a single-season school record with 23 wins. "Our seniors gave a lot to this program all year."

Biedenbach described a teary locker room, as 7-foot-7 junior center Kenny George comforted seniors K.J. Garland, Vincent James, Garrett Moles and Bryan Smithson. The seniors combined for 32 points, 14 assists, nine rebounds and 13 turnovers.

The Bulldogs lost 66-48 to Winthrop in the 2008 Big South Conference championship March 8 at Justice Center, missing their chance to play in the NCAA tournament. But as regular-season conference champions with Winthrop, they advanced to the NIT.

At the close of the season, Biedenbach was named Big South Conference Coach of the Year, and George was named Defensive Player of the Year. George led the Big South Conference and was sixth nationally in blocked shots with 90 and a 3.8 per game average. Senior guards Smithson and Garland were named to the Big South first team all-conference and second team, respectively.

This is the fourth regular-season title for the Bulldogs, all under Biedenbach, who was Coach of the Year in 1997 and 2002. Smithson led the team in scoring (16.4), steals (46), three-pointers made (54) and free throw percentage (83.3%). Garland, second-leading scorer with a 13.6 average, topped in assists with 160 with 495 career assists, ninth all-time in the Big South Conference. Garland, a math major, made the Big South All-Academic team for the second straight year. George led the nation in field goal percentage at 71.3 percent (134-of-188) and is UNC Asheville's third-leading scorer with a 12.5 average.

www.unca.edu/athletics

Track & Field Shows Promise

Natalie Pearson's second-place finish in the 200 meters highlighted UNC Asheville's performance in the first Outdoor Track and Field meet of the season, the March 15 Coastal Carolina Invitational. Although Pearson missed much of the Indoor season due to an injury, she took second in the talented field with a time of 24.90. Her time in the 100 meters was 12.35. On the men's side, senior Omar Ahmad placed eighth in the long jump with a leap of 6.46 meters. Three sprinters in the 100 were Dane Corriher (11.55), Ahmad (11.56) and Brandon Hamilton (11.64). Corriher (22.96) and Hamilton (24.29) also competed in the 200 meters.

At the 49er Relays in Charlotte on March 22, Erik Nabi won his flight in the javelin with a toss of 51.12 meters and finished 12th overall. Andrew Burnette set a personal record in the 800 meters at 1:55, finishing eighth of more than 50 runners competing. Elizabeth Duncan finished second in her flight in the 1500, with a time of 4:52, and Katie Olert (5:21), Emily Becker (5:21) and Katherine Clark (5:31) all had PRs. In the 800, Olert won her flight with a time of 2:22, and Duncan and Ingrid Allstaedt weren't far behind at 2:26. Ahmad finished 13th against strong fields in both the long jump (6.37 meters) and triple jump (13.31). Daniel Corriber had good results in the hammer throw (40.54) and shot put (13.28), also competing in the discus (39.28). Simon Haake had a discus throw of 31.10 meters.

Above: Natalie Pearson took second place in the 200 meters at the Coastal Carolina Invitational on March 15.

Left: Bulldogs basketball coach Eddie Biedenbach (center) with senior guards K.J. Garland (left) and Bryan Smithson (right). Biedenbach was named 2008 Big South Coach of the Year, Smithson made the Big South first team all-conference, and Garland made the second team, as well as the Big South All-Academic team for the second year.

Parents Corner

Parents Council Works to Enhance Student Opportunities In and Outside Classroom

It's hard to believe that another academic year is almost over! This year has seen a number of advances in our programs, all aimed at enhancing the educational experience for UNC Asheville students. We've sponsored programs on business etiquette and networking, financial planning, employment benefits and other realworld skills.

During spring break, the third World of Work Career Interest Trip, made possible by parents through the Parents Fund, took 15 students to Chicago for a very productive four days. They visited alumni in various career settings, with the strongest focus on the media and communications industries. An important part of the trips is learning how to be resourceful—students make their own appointments and determine their schedules for the most part. By all accounts, the trip was a huge success, and our thanks to all who helped make this event possible.

We would like to extend our thanks to Parents Council members whose students have completed their degrees—Beth and Hoyt Phillips of Greensboro, parents of December graduate Jessica, and Suzy and Bob Lippard of Raleigh, parents of May graduate Brittany. The time and energy they have given the Parents Council helped to provide extra funding for some very exciting UNC Asheville activities. We welcome several new members: Lilly Driver of Cherokee, mother of Heather '11; Eli Jordfald and Rick Harmsen of Cary, parents of Jenny Harmsen '11; Jayne Keifer, mother of Daniel Goodman '11, and Jim Jenkins of Cary; Joyce Watkins King and Gary King of Raleigh, parents of Savannah King '11; Margy Murphy and John Erwin of Candler, parents of Caitlin Erwin '09 and Patrick Erwin '11; and Pam and King Prather of Cary, parents of Nicholas '09, Lindsey '10 and Rachel '10.

We salute all our dedicated parents, whose commitment and support have helped to make a difference in the lives of our students.

For information and updates, visit www.unca.edu/family.

—Pat and Paul Samuels, Co-chairs, National Parents Council

Dates to Remember

April 15 Undergraduate Research Conference

April 29 Last day of classes

May 10 Commencement

June 5 Summer term I classes begin

July 7 Summer term II classes begin

Sept. 19–21 Family Weekend

Oct. 13-14 Fall Break (no classes)

Nov. 26–28 Thanksgiving Break

A Look Inside

N.C. Center for Health & Wellness

May Commencement

Math Literacy Summit

Choir Performs at White House

State of Black Asheville Conference

UNC Asheville Strategic Plan

Mountains to the World Fund

Bulldogs Briefs

Parents Corner

Return Service Requested

Division of Alumni & Development 320 Owen Hall, CPO #1800 UNC Asheville, One University Heights Asheville, North Carolina 28804-8507

